

THERE is no doubt that commuting will be a pleasure once the two lines of metro and elevated road to Electronic City are ready. But we must also know that just two lines for the city of Bangalore are not adequate. Bangalore should aim at a maximum of six lines covering the entire city as quickly as possible and once these are ready it will be an absolute bliss to commute from one part of Bangalore to any other part.

It goes without saying that properties around and along such speedy connectivity projects are bound to appreciate purely for the reason that commuting to such localities will become easy, simple and pleasurable. Therefore areas which hitherto were not attractive in terms of real estate development along the metro lines will henceforth become much more attractive and appreciation in such areas will certainly be very attractive.

Bangalore has many advantages such as enviable weather, pool of talent, cosmopolitan outlook of the people, knowledge of English with majority of the population and despite complaints, Bangalore even today is by far the cleanest city in the country. All these advantages coupled with better commuting with Metro and elevated roads will make Bangalore an even more preferred destination than before.

Any citizen of any city would certainly want his city to be one of the best in the world. Bangalore is no exception and Bangaloreans will no doubt be an excited lot when they see their city on par with global standards.
